Patty Tuite is an American singer/songwriter and musician who has her roots in blues music, while embracing other genres as well. This experienced multi-instrumentalist just released her latest all-original recording "Consider This," on which she demonstrates the reach of her versatility and creative power. Although her style is influenced by Bonnie Raitt, Ella Fitzgerald, Etta James and Susan Tedeschi - and fans of those artists will surely enjoy her work - Patty brings something fresh and entirely her own to each song.

The recording is produced by Grammy Award-winner Paul Nelson, who also features as lead electric, slide, and acoustic guitarist. Early response to the album has been celebratory; the album has garnered accolades from DJs and industry professionals who have said, "It's a masterpiece!" "It knocked my socks off," and "I'm listening to it over and over, hearing more nuances each time!" Between Patty's dynamic, soulful vocals and the diverse instrumentation, there is plenty to satisfy any music lover.

Considerable skill. Considerable talent. Considerable creativity. It's all on "Consider This!"
